

Grey Owl's Will Asks Protection For Beavers In Prince Albert Park

LONDON, May 8.—A request that his beaver be allowed to live in Prince Albert National Park was contained in the will of Grey Owl, died April 13, 1935.

The will was probated in the name of Archie McNeil, Grey Owl's real name.

Leaving his wife, Yvonne, and their children, $60,000 and his personal effects, the will of Grey Owl asked his executors to help his first wife, Yvonne, if it is needed. Another is a full-blooded Indian maiden whom Grey Owl married when he returned to Canada after serving in the Great War.

Referring to the beaver, his will said:

"In memory of the affection, friendship and confidence I have given me of the will, I request the Canadian government, that they roll and provide and that all beaver that have been the object of my care and attention and as present in Prince Albert National Park, be allowed to live in their present habitat and under no circumstances be sold or parted with."

The people of Canada have left due regard, his original manuscript, request, souvenirs, equipment and papers, requesting they be exhibited in Prince Albert National Park.

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY NEAR EXTINCT

One of Britain's Historical Political Forces Breaking Up

By J. F. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON, May 1.—One of Britain's historical political forces, the Independent Labor party, which gave Vincent Snowden and Ramsay MacDonald their start in public life, faces virtual extinction.

A power in the land since 1933 when it was formed by two Scottish miners, Keir Hardie and Robert Smiley, the I.L.P. seems to be breaking up.

Already one-quarter of its parliamentary force, C. Buchanan, has deserted to the official Labor party and two others, C. Stephen and Alexander McDowall, are drifting with the I.L.P. That would leave only James Maxton, one of the most picturesque and best liked members of the House of Commons, as sole representative of the party.

PROPAGANDA AGENCY

The I.L.P. was formed seven years before Hardie persuaded the trade unions to enter politics as a Socialist movement and formed the official Labor party in 1933. The I.L.P. was affiliated with the Labor movement chiefly as a propaganda agency in the early days of the party, and was the Fabian Society.

SCOTTISH PARTY

One claim eventually led to the I.L.P. breaking away from the official Labor movement to adopt an independent stand. Now it looks as though Maxton, who was born a Tory and became a Liberal, would not be able to lead the party. He has no equal in British politics—always a smiling revolutionary who has no equal in British politics—always a smiling revolutionary who has no equal in British politics.

POPE RENEWS HIS PLEA FOR WORLD PEACE

Pontiff Delivers Appeal In French From Vatican City

VATICAN CITY, May 1.—Pope Pius XII renewed his appeal Sunday for "that peace so ardently desired by humanity as a consequence of a German-Italian military alliance caused new tension in Europe."

The Pope's plea was made in a speech delivered in French and broadcast from Vatican City to the European Congress at Algiers, Algeria.

It followed a week of conferences between papal nuncios and government officials in various European capitals, reports the Holy Father's endeavor found means of assuring the continent against an outbreak of war.

VATICAN SILENT

His message Sunday, however, gave no indication of the nature of a further, would discuss by the Vatican and the Vatican itself remained silent on the subject.

The Pope again exhorted the world to pray for peace. He promised to men of good will, peace and brotherhood, by the apostle and the apostle of peace, peace among nations trembling in uncertainty.

He mentioned by inference the tension in the Mediterranean, saying that "Neither the burning waves of the sea nor the fringes of desolation which shake the shores had been able to disturb the 'mystic plan' of those attending the conference."

CRUSADE OF PRAYER

He called its communicants to remember his appeal April 20 for a "Crusade of prayer" for peace during the month of May.

The Pope has been reported on good authority as putting the moral force of the church and the diplomatic resources of the Vatican into a campaign to preserve the peace of Europe.

Source familiar with Vatican policy said Saturday the papal nuncio to Germany, France, Italy, Portugal and other countries had been instructed by the pontiff to confer with high officials in those cases, letters of governments-in-exile, offer to safeguard peace.

Informal candid interviews Friday between Monsignor Oscar Orsini, nuncio to Germany, and Ambassador Hitler at Berlin, and Monsignor Palesi, nuncio to France, and the foreign minister, Georges Bonnet.

The Vatican official was silent on such diplomatic moves, but it could not be learned definitely whether the pope is presenting a peace plea here from the Vatican.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, MAY 8

The impression given in Nazi quarters that the Danzig government would declare the free city a part of Germany and invite German authorities in neighboring East Prussia to take over the government.

Thus, Danzig, ostensibly without Chancellor Hitler having moved a finger, would pass by their own future in accordance with the payment of self-determination.

This, however, would not solve the question of a Nazi link between East Prussia and Germany. Polish troops are in Poznan (the Polish corridor) which separates the fatherland from its province.

Mrs. F. D. R. Has Final Fittings of Gowns She Will Wear for Royalty

NEW YORK, May 1.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had the final fittings today of the gown she will wear during the visit of the King and Queen of England.

Miss Lucille Mahoney, who has been Mrs. Roosevelt's designer for the past 18 years, created the gown, including a white ermine evening gown to be worn during the visit of the King and Queen of England.

For evening wear Mrs. Roosevelt selected a gown of chiffon in pastel shades of mauve and natural Alouze lace. When she accompanied the King and Queen to the world's fair, Mrs. Roosevelt will wear an ensemble including a star print dress trimmed with navy blue velvet lace. The coat has a jacket effect to the hip line and from there down is made of pleated silk print. A navy hat and navy gloves complete the costume.

Mrs. Roosevelt also has chosen an afternoon ensemble of rose silk print fashioned in a tailored suit, a Scotch plaid chiffon dinner gown and two tailored casual dinner gowns.

Boring for the Future

Oil companies plan to spend $2,500,000 this summer in boring fifteen wells in Turner Valley, in addition to $1,650,000 now being spent there in drilling eleven wells started since the first of the year. Ordinarily production of a commodity is expanded when and because there is a market at hand for more than can be supplied from the existing sources, but the new wells are being drilled in Alberta's oil fields in face of knowledge that the presently available market is already over-supplied. The object is to increase the oil supply to a point that would make the construction of a pipeline to the Coast or to Lakehead, or that would offer the railways an assured large volume of traffic in return for low freight rates.

If this is speculation it is not of the "blind" type, but has a strong mixture of shrewd sense, as well as faith that oil in the required quantities can be found in Alberta. Those who are putting their money into the project are showing courage and deserve a good reward. If they succeed their success will react to the permanent advantage of every branch of production and trade. Whether they succeed or do not, the money they have put in the effort is an important factor in creating employment and stimulating conditions, particularly in the part of the province where the operations are being carried on.

Abusing A Privilege

Mr. Woodsorth, C.C.F. leader, called the attention of parliament to the activity of a German-language paper published in Winnipeg, which he said is promulgating Nazi propaganda and creating dangerous dissension between sections of the population in the Manitoba capital and perhaps elsewhere. He seemed to want the Government to put a stop to the mischief.

The irony of it is that Mr. Woodsorth was largely responsible for the repeal of war-time legislation which would have made corrective action easy and effective; in opposing which legislation, it is only fair to recall, he had the sympathy and approval of a good many who do not share his theories of government. At the time, it was the Communists who were troubling, and it was mainly on their account that the legislation was retained for years after the war had ended.

But the freedom given to them by repeal of the legislation was equally given to all others. It is not therefore clear what the Government is doing to prevent propaganda-mongers, unless they go beyond the bounds of legitimate discussion and counsel violence. This they are not likely to do, though continual agitation might easily result in some of their disciples breaking the law and getting themselves arrested and sent to jail.

In the interests of peace, and particularly in the interests of those to whom it is addressed, parliament might well revive the restrictive legislation to the point of drawing the line between reasonable liberty of speech and license to carry on propaganda of a strife-breeding brand. In this instance the parties concerned do not complain if parliament adopted the regulations laid down by Herr Hitler for dealing with those who in Germany speak or write in opposition to Nazi doctrine, policy and practice.

What It Comes to

Mr. Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, said something to the banking and commerce committees of the House of Commons which Canadians would well do to re-read and ponder. He said: "As debt is an asset of the people, what would be the object of repaying it? There is often an object in an individual getting out of debt. But in a country where public and private debt is decreasing, you have a country going backwards and in which poverty is becoming widespread."

Public debts usually represent public works in themselves useful, while the debts are assets of those who hold the government bonds, and some of these bonds are held by wealthy people, but some are held by those who are not wealthy, and who neither have other sources of income nor are personally fitted to invest their capital otherwise; aged persons, widows and those who have had little or no business experience.

This of course is no excuse for plunging a country into disproportionately large debt, nor for paying undue interest rates. But these points, considering borrowing money and spending it for useful public works is one means of redistributing buying power. The bonds are bought by those who have means. The money goes mainly into the pockets of those who have less or little. And the interest on the money is paid by those who have, not by those who have not.

In point of fact the revenue from Dominion income taxation pays the charges on the national debt, and the income tax hits no one with an income less than $1000 a year and no married couple with an income less than $2000 per year—with added exemption of $400 for each dependent child.

These are reasons why Canadian governments should do their borrowing in Canada, and pay the interest charges to Canadians.

They show also that it is good business, and in the general welfare, to carry out work-making enterprises by the use of borrowed money, within measure of course. The net result of doing this is to circulate money that might otherwise lie idle, and when money lies idle men also are idle.

Editorial Notes

The CBC is planning to "cover" the visit of Their Majesties by a suitable series of broadcasts from various points. Suitable except that most of the broadcasts will occur during the work-hours of the day. It can surely be arranged to repeat these broadcasts during the evening hours, and thus give working men, business men, professional men and farmers a chance to listen in.

German papers did not carry reports of the speech of the Polish foreign minister, while the radio service merely announced that he "delivered his speech." Russian papers the day before carried only a four line announcement that Litvinoff had resigned. How would Canadian readers like to depend for information on papers which published only what politicians told them to?

None of the provinces, it is stated, has yet asked the Bank of Canada to act as its banker or financial advisor. A reason suggested for the boycott is that the provinces are apprehensive of fear they would be putting themselves under some sort of control or regulation by the Dominion.

An alternative suggestion is that if they were doing their banking through the Bank of Canada they would not be free to run to New York for money and thus put their taxpayers on a line to pay premiums and approval of a good many who do not share his theories of government. At the time, it was the Communists who were troubling, and it was mainly on their account that the legislation was retained for years after the war had ended.

Firm But Not Provocative

LONDON—Papers of the United Kingdom are generally agreed the Warsaw speech by Colonel Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, was firm but not provocative.

The Daily Express editorially called the speech "an utterance of a man who was ready to take his seat at the conference table if he could get anyone to join him there."

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal) saw Danzig "just as much as Austria or Czechoslovakia a test of German readiness to negotiate," and said: "If the Germans claim that Danzig was justified (which it is not) it will still be the duty of this country to support Poland in insisting that the matter can only be discussed amicably without the threat of arms mobilized on the frontier."

The Times (Independent) said the problem of Polish-German relations was which must be settled by diplomacy and added: "No doubt the Government of Warsaw are ready to make improvements in the position of German minorities in Poland, Prussia and elsewhere and to grant yet more facilities to Germans on thorough-going terms. There are also other points which might be brought up in the course of their negotiations."

Repeating its previous statement that the problem of Danzig was "not worth a war," The Times said any attempt to force would "convert it at once from a local dispute into one more instance of methods which the world is no longer prepared to tolerate."

The Yorkshire Post (Conservative) said: "In view of our guarantee to Poland the speech is of the greatest importance to the people of this country but it also is a good example of what no regrets that the guarantee was given."

Family Living Expenses in Canada

Wage-earner families in Canada spend approximately 64 per cent of their total income upon the necessities of life—food, fuel, light, shelter and clothing. This is one of the striking results concerning the living standards of Canadian wage-earner families recently obtained from a survey of Canadian urban family living standards. This survey was made at the last session of parliament which provided for an investigation by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics into nutrition and living expenditures in the representative urban areas of Canada, covering all the provinces of the Dominion.

Living expenditure records were collected for the year ending September 30, 1938, from 1,135 families of British origin in eleven cities, from 211 families of French origin in the two Quebec cities which were surveyed, and in addition 93 records were collected from families of Winnipeg and families of other racial origins. Families contributing records were selected at random from specific residential areas which holds with certain characteristics which make them typical of Canadian wage-earner homes. These include one or more children were present in each home, and in some cases one lodger or a domestic also lived with the family. Earnings in the sample ranged from $450 to $900 per annum.

An outstanding fact apparent from the summary data available is the remarkable similarity of expenditures of the various racial groups upon important budget items. As income and living standards rise, the proportion of income spent upon these necessities tends to decrease. Other budget expenditures, such as recreation, are closely related to the amount of income. The budget groups covering necessities accounted for nearly two-thirds of the total expenditures each year, the proportions for the individual cities being concentrated within the narrow range between 62.8 and 65.4 per cent. The two Quebec cities (Montreal-Quebec) for the British and French families, amongst which there was no significant difference. The proportions for families of other racial origins were very close to those in Winnipeg and Montreal respectively.

The greatest difference in proportions of expenditures was in the case of food, clothing and shelter. These ranged from 25.3 per cent for Charlottetown up to 32.4 per cent for Montreal families of other than British and French origin. There was a second and third place for food percentages to be highest in the larger cities.

The proportions of expenditures devoted to the provision of shelter ranged from 15.1 per cent in Charlottetown to 20.9 per cent in Ottawa. In Vancouver and Vancouver, the proportions were increased materially by families which had bought homes during the year, making substantial payments from savings or loans. With the exception of these two cities, capital expenditures upon homes did not exceed an average of one per cent. Almost exactly one-third of the families covered by the survey were homeowners, but there were wide variations in the proportions of owners in individual cities. These ranged from 2 per cent for Montreal families of British origin to 48 per cent in Winnipeg.

Average expenditures upon fuel and light ranged between 4.3 per cent in Quebec City and 7.7 per cent in Charlottetown. The percentages were apparently more closely related to the accessibility of the supplies of fuel than to climate. Clothing expenditures were also closely related to the climate, varying only from 9.6 per cent for the families in Vancouver to 12.5 per cent for Montreal families of other than British and French origin. The second and third places were occupied by French and British families resident in Montreal.

In the residual budget groups, correspondingly close limits existed. Recreation averages, for example, ranged between 4.3 per cent in St. John and 7.2 per cent in Vancouver. For British and French families, the combined totals of savings, life insurance premiums, and payments on debt included, prior to the survey year varied not more than one per cent throughout the range of averages for all twelve cities, and centered around 9 per cent. Net savings were by no means as high as the total savings accounts outstanding on September 30 of the survey year averaged nearly 8 per cent of total expenditures. For families of other racial origins, the percentage of the "savings" group fell to 7.2 per cent in Winnipeg and to 6.4 per cent in Montreal. The percentages for the combined group of expenditures for all families in the twelve cities were as follows: Home furnishings and maintenance, 7 per cent; health and personal care, 6 per cent; motor cars, 4 per cent; other transportation, 2 per cent; and education, community welfare and gifts, 4 per cent. Indirect payments for educational purposes, 6.5 per cent.

The Passing Show

By J. E. COOPER

Chief Constable Canning of Scotland Yard is travelling ahead of the Royal tour to see that all arrangements are perfected—and double-checked—so that reasonable precautions are taken to protect Their Majesties against a repetition of the incident at the Coronation procession, when a crazed man on the front row of spectators made a serious attempt to stab the Queen and King. But there's one class of piller who will be present on every occasion when Their Majesties appear in public, against whom all Scotland Yard will be powerless. That class is the "fashion pirates." They will be there with cameras and eagle eyes to take in every detail of Queen Elizabeth's attire, to wire and cable the fashion centres.

Fifty complete toilettes will be worn by the Queen during her visit to Canada and United States. No State dress is worn which must be guarded than the particulars about the hats, coats, dresses and furs that the Queen will wear. On occasion like this, Her Majesty will wear the leading manufacturer of ladies' wear will set his eye teeth for fashion inspiration. It is known that Her Majesty has a liking for pastel shades of blue, green, beige, rose, pink and every tint of lilac. She will wear one dress, and the title Princesses will wear a coat of cloth which has been made by the woollen manufacturers of America. For the rest, materials will largely come from the mills of Scotland.

But whether fashions will be like balloons or pipe stems, akirt long or short, the waistline round the neck or near the calf, are secrets known only to the designer and the chief work of the Queen's dress designer. It would never do for Her Majesty to appear in public wearing dresses and hats like half the women present.

One thing husbands and fathers may rest assured of, Her Majesty with Her Scottish common sense won't lead the way into any absurdities of fashion. Much of her appeal to the British people is in her good sense and avoidance of the spectacular. In Norman Hartnell's words, "Her Majesty is a woman who will wear a GENIUS IN her hair and a genius who knows FASHIONING how to furnish her with gowns and hats and accessories which are beautiful in line, yet admirably suit her whimsie, kindly personality."

Dress designing is a real art. I have a young brother-in-law in a high position in England who, as an artist, musician, poet, linguist and writer has been obscured by his business success. He is a real genius, and he is beautiful in line, yet admirably suit her whimsie, kindly personality. During the war he was in breaking in horses for the artillery. Yet of all his myriad talents, the one most apt to that of designing dresses for his wife and daughters. If only the big English and armament firms in England would do better, I think he could make a fortune in his wife's wardrobe. He is a real genius, and he is beautiful in line, yet admirably suit her whimsie, kindly personality.

Norman Hartnell has the same gift. At Cambridge his ambition was to become an artist. He had not the money to go to Paris to study for an art career. At twenty was hopelessly in love with a girl, and he could not get on in a career of a millionaire's daughter. Lady Duff Gordon saw the designs he had made for an amateur dramatic show in his second year. She was so impressed that he took up designing as a career.

The remainder of Norman Hartnell's career to date is worth recording, for it shows in an unusual career one of the most interesting illustrations of how Fate often gives one a kick in the pants with the kind of intentions. At first, none of the big firms would look at his designs. He took a job at $15 a week with a dressmaker to start a fashion centre of his own. He had his sister to help him, and two assistants in one of the big firms.

He had had time to face at first. Then one or two actresses took notice of his designs. One of them, Mrs. J. H. Gordon, was a friend of his with Edward Everett Horton in the sophisticated film picture that showed in Edmonton, about the man in the looking glass—an ultra-smart dresser, and a real creature. She was a society beauty came his way. Then in 1935 he designed the Duchess of Gloucester's wedding dress. He had 400 models in his studio. He was one of the richest men in the fashion business.

He says he gets his ideas from "anything beautiful"—a tree, a picture or a scene. He studies Italian and French paintings in the National Gallery for inspiration. We'll all be under his influence in a few months' time. Let that be the excuse for this dissertation.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELIAS

When a British subject began, with great secrecy, to extract the incredible mineral wealth from Dead Sea, they appointed a physician and nurses to their staff, to serve the health of the workers. After a year, they discharged the physician, and all but one of the nurses, as unnecessary.

As the manager of the enterprise jubilantly said to me, "The Dead Sea is a Sea of Life"—salubrious, but with sunstrokes or other climatic ailments. He even talked of restoring the Roman sanatorium by its shores.

Wealth and health from the region that has for ages been a symbol of danger and desolation. The narrow strip of land, which is the Dead Sea, is a symbol of danger and desolation. The narrow strip of land, which is the Dead Sea, is a symbol of danger and desolation.

He has turned many of our deserts and Dead Seas into places of blessing. O beautiful Father, and we pray that Thou wilt bless the work of Thy people, and that Thou wilt bless the work of Thy people, and that Thou wilt bless the work of Thy people.

through school rates or taxes, were not included in the group. It included only those to persons not members of the family. The proportion of families owning motor cars varied according to district. In the Maritime provinces, about one-third of surveyed families were car owners, in Quebec provinces about one-tenth, in Ontario nearly one-half and in western cities about one-third.

Inflation and Deflation

Editor, Bulletin: In his speech before the Commons Banking and Finance Committee at Ottawa the Governor of the Bank of Canada pointed out the dangers of inflation if the government were to issue currency in payment of public works. However, he was unable to bring himself to say that inflation is a danger. He said that inflation is a danger, but that it is not a danger if it is controlled. He said that inflation is a danger, but that it is not a danger if it is controlled.

For the government to issue money during the periods of business depression is a dangerous policy. It is a policy that is likely to lead to inflation. It is a policy that is likely to lead to inflation. It is a policy that is likely to lead to inflation.

When a currency issue is made, it is a matter of fact that the money is put into circulation. It is a matter of fact that the money is put into circulation. It is a matter of fact that the money is put into circulation.

Maw got up and looked over the printed lines across the paper. "What do it say?" she asked. "I don't know," replied Uncle Henry, "I ain't learned to read yet."

What To Do

Answer—Pencil and paper games are almost invariably a safe and interesting sport to propose, and one is sure that they will pay their own way.

Ask the guests to each write a slip of paper ten things they like, signing their names before the papers are collected. The host then reads the lists, but not the names of the writers, asking the guests to guess the persons according to the list of dislikes. The guests should keep their own score on paper as the lists are read. The highest score, of course, should receive a trifling prize. In the same manner ten "likes" are next listed and scored. Likes and dislikes may be habits, foods, persons, books,

HOME OWNERS ALBERTA NOT DISPOSSESSED

Given a chance. We therefore have steadfastly refused to allow home-owners to be dispossessed of their homes provided they showed a fair and honest attempt to do what they could be expected to do.

"This applies to the cities as well as to the country, although we have been more difficult under certain city chapters to do all we would like."

"In the east and among the financiers I have been charged with encouraging fraud by the debtors. This I most emphatically deny. Any debtor who is able to pay is attempting to evade his just debts and will receive no support from the government."

"This class as a whole is not prevalent in Alberta. I am more convinced that the error, if any, is on the other side. Some debtors are being forced to pay more than they can afford to pay and still they provide a fair standard of living for themselves and their families."

GENERAL POLICY

"Now regarding the bonus on fuel oil for the farmers. I need only say that this is in line with our general policy. We realize that the farmers are the backbone of our province and if they do not get a fair return for their products then everybody suffers."

"When we heard that the federal government had cut the wheat price with the heavy hand of a discrimination against our farmers we knew that the situation was an impossible one."

"We therefore set the machinery in motion to enable the farmers at an early date to save cost of production. We have been assisted by our treasury department that on all accounts opened on or before May 1 that they will be able to pay a bonus on all fuel purchases paid for during June and upon all accounts opened after May 1, they will only be able to pay a bonus on fuel purchases paid after July 1."

The premier then announced that during July and the first two weeks of August, the Prophetic Bible Conference would close broadcasting and on August 20 the meeting will be sponsored by the Social Credit parliamentary group at Ottawa.

LETTERS READ

Several letters were read by Earl Davidson and were commented on by the premier.

One was from the Ladies' Jubilee Group of Edmonton, congratulating the premier on his reception at the teachers' convention, his commenting on this, he said that the teachers were indeed very kind to me. It is rather encouraging, if you accomplish a little after a vigorous fight to receive a little good cheer from your fellows. However, as I told the teachers, in my determined effort to improve the educational setup in this province, I only did my duty as a teacher of many years experience, was bound to do."

Mr. Davidson then read the following from a Winnipeg newspaper: "You made some time ago you said there would be money in the province and that our children's children would have to pay for it. We do not know just what you meant but now we understand as we have special remark on the bills and we have found that it was handed out by an old-time party."

SUPPORT IS STRONGER

"We figure it is just some slush fund coming in that we are going to vote stronger than ever for Social Credit and although we are in dire need of some money we Social Creditors will not prostitute ourselves for a few dollars even if we have to go on relief. If you care to comment on this over the Sunday night broadcast we will try to make it even if we have to go where there is a radio working. We are with you to the end of the road. Carry on. We will look for this summer."

Commenting on this letter, the premier, to whom the letter was addressed, said: "If the people all parts of the province understand that the freedom of their children in the future years is of more value than a few special earmarked bills in the present day, we shall surely win our full share."

Pat Monaghan Retiring From Fire Department

A resident of Edmonton since 1908 and a member of the Edmonton fire department since 1916, Patrick John Monaghan, 64, is retiring on pension and plans to lead a quiet life at his home at 1500 9th street.

For several years Mr. Monaghan was a teacher in the Gungahy district and later entered the real estate business before joining the fire department. He was the owner of one of the first big expensive automobiles ever seen in the city.

2,000 ENTRIES
ARE RECEIVED FOR YOUTH FAIR

More than 1,500 fair entries had been received up to 4 p.m. Saturday and another 500 entries were being received, according to officials of the Boys' and Girls' fair, who stated Monday that the entries this year would far exceed the total of 2,000 received last year. The fair will be held from May 10 to 13 in the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. buildings.

Livestock and dog competitions, recreation contests, cooking competitions are still open for entries. Final date for entering the cooking competition is Tuesday, May 9, while closing date for the bicycle competition is Thursday, May 11. Swimming and bowling contests have until Friday to get their entries in to the fair office, and exhibitors in the livestock and dog section of the fair may enter as late as Saturday.

The fair will be officially opened at 9 a.m. Wednesday in the west wing of the Y.M.C.A. by His Honor Lord-Gov. J. C. Bowen. The fair will be open to the public at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. It will continue until Saturday evening when all winners of major awards will be supplied with their prizes.

Standards Act
Not in Conflict
With Combines

SASKATOON, May 8.—The Industrial Standards Act of Saskatchewan is not in conflict with the Combines Investigation Act or the criminal code, and therefore is within the powers of the province, Mr. Justice H. V. Macdonald of the court of king's bench, ruled here.

Mr. Justice Macdonald found that Fred Pule of Saskatoon, guilty of charging less than 40 cents for a hair, the minimum price set by an agreement under the Act.

Peeping Tom

CALGARY, May 8.—Calgary has a "peeping Tom." When not occupied in investigating a dozen other cases, the police are busy peeping through the Public Library district searching for a "peeping Tom."

The police are looking for a detective freedom and economic security before very long. That is the spirit that brings to us equity and justice in the present day, a broken monopoly, graft and tyranny. Thank you, Wansham for your stirring letter."
